Acquisitions Information

The Midkiff Learning Center was built at the Diamond Head end of Konia field at the Kapālama campus in 1977 and named after Dr. Midkiff in his honor. He was a Trustee of the Schools at that time. A room called The Frank E. Midkiff Papers contains his life's work and awards. His wife, Marjorie, supervised the furnishing of the room. Awards and photographs filled the Diamond Head side of the room. Glass front koa cases were provided for Samoan artifacts, other awards and memorabilia. He may have begun to deposit his papers beginning in 1977.

Processing Information

Lela Goodell, a contract archivist, was hired to process the Midkiff papers. She completed her work on April 30, 1998. The Kamehameha Schools Archives opened in 1992 in the same room and accommodated to the given environment.

In 2008, Candace W. Lee, the Assistant Archivist, wrote the biographical highlights, photographed, measured and processed the awards and artifacts and created an illustrated, annotated inventory. As a result of these additions, the name of the collection is changed from the Frank E. Midkiff Papers to the Frank E. Midkiff Collection. The Finding Aid was not completed for various reasons until 2013.

| Ingram M. Stainback | March 14, 1960 | The Order of the Splintered Paddle emerges from one of the best known laws of King Kamehameha I, the Mamahoe Kanawai of 1797, often referred to as the Magna Charta of Hawaii. It originated according to the following legend: While plundering off the Puna coast of the island of Hawaii as a young man, Kamehameha skirmished with two fishermen. During the encounter, his foot slipped into a crevice of lava rock and held him fast. For the first and only time in his life, he found himself helpless. One of the fishermen, seeing his helplessness, struck him on the head with a canoe paddle so hard that the paddle splintered. Kamehameha eventually escaped. Years later, after he became King of the Islands of Hawaii, he conducted an extensive search for the two fishermen and found them. Although they admitted their guilt, Kamehameha decreed they should be pardoned. He issued a mandate, however: henceforth, any wanton attack on the weak or the helpless would be punished severely. Thus the Law of the Splintered Paddle came into history—the first recognition of human rights for Hawaii's people. When translated, it reads: | "Oh people, respect the gods—respect the big man, the small man, and let the aged men and women, and the children, walk the highways and sleep by the wayside. No one will molest them. Death, the penalty." The Order of the Splintered Paddle is presented to persons who have made major contributions to the welfare of the State of Hawaii. Recommendations are made to the Board of Directors of the Chamber of Commerce of Hawaii by its Awards Committee. This committee is composed of the Governor of Hawaii, the Mayor of Honolulu, the Chairman of the Board and President of the Chamber of Commerce of Hawaii. The Awards Committee feels that those who have expressed the spirit of the proclamation of Kamehameha the Great in their daily lives, and in the contributions they have made to the welfare of their fellow man without thought of personal gain can appropriately be honored by the bestowing of The Order of the Splintered Paddle. |

On January 23, 1977, Kamehameha Schools Kāpalama Campus dedicated the high school learning center as the Frank E. Midkiff Learning Center.

The following is the dedication program:

FRANK E. MIDKIFF

Frank E. Midkiff, senior trustee of The Kamehameha Schools/ Bernice P. Bishop Estate, has a long and distinguished record of service to the Hawaiian community. He first came to these Islands more than six decades ago and has been professionally associated with the Schools/Estate for nearly half a century.

He was president of The Kamehameha Schools for 10 years -- from 1923 to 1934. During this time, academic standards improved and the campus was relocated -- from the Bishop Museum grounds to Kāpalama Heights.

Throughout his career, Mr. Midkiff has promoted the perpetuation of Hawaiian culture and demonstrated his belief in the dignity of the Hawaiian people. As trustee, he has supported Kamehameha's growth: campus programs--from serving 170 students in 1939 to 2,600 today; Extension Education Division--established in 1962 to provide educational services to thousands of part-Hawaiian young people unable to be accommodated in the Schools campus programs.

In addition to his service to the Hawaiian people, Mr. Midkiff has been active in community affairs. He is senior trustee of the Charles R. Bishop Trust, first honorary member of the Bishop Museum Corporation, and a trustee of Punahou School. He has been a founder of several organizations, including the Hawaii National Guard's first company of Americans of Japanese Ancestry in 1917 and the first of Hawaii's community associations. He has served as trustee of the Bishop Museum, president and executive vice-president of the Honolulu Chamber of Commerce, civilian aide to the Secretary of the Army for Hawaii, secretary and president of the Social Science Association of Honolulu, High Commissioner of the Trust Territory of the Pacific, and honorary Danish Consul, a position for which he was knighted by Denmark's King Frederick IX. In addition, he helped establish the Frederick Doolittle Barstow Foundation for American Samoans. Under Mr. Midkiff's guidance, this Foundation has built a private school for boys and established a teacher-training institute.

It is in honor of Frank E. Midkiff, distinguished educator and civic leader, that the learning center is named.

THE FRANK E. MIDKIFF LEARNING CENTER

A learning center is more than a library. It houses printed materials -- books, pamphlets and periodicals, and audio-visual materials -- filmstrips, recordings and the equipment needed to use them. It has special areas for study and discussion. It contains space and equipment for preparing presentations that include posters, charts, photographs, and recordings as well as written information. Most important, a learning center is staffed with people who can provide assistance to students and teachers in finding and using materials effectively.

These concepts were first put into practice at the Kamehameha Schools Elementary Division in 1957 with the opening of Kānāmālu and its learning center. Next, in 1970, the library at the Intermediate Division was renovated to become a learning center with adequate space for materials, equipment and study. The opening of the Frank E. Midkiff Learning Center completes the final stage of providing learning center facilities for students throughout the campus program.

Need

The need for a single facility on the high school campus to house books and other instructional materials became apparent in 1965 with the introduction of coeducation. Neither of the libraries -- one on upper campus and the other on the lower -- was adequate, each with limited reading and storage areas. Also, recent years have brought changes in the use of educational technology, particularly television and other visual means of communication.

Facilities

The Frank E. Midkiff Learning Center is designed to meet these needs now and in the foreseeable future. Included in the building are a library with a capacity for over 75,000 volumes, a special room to house books on Hawaiians, a television studio, an audio and graphics center and areas for seating 700 students. In all, the building contains nearly 50,000 square feet of work and study space.

Services, Materials and Equipment

In addition, the learning center brings together services, materials and equipment formerly housed at various locations on campus. These include:

SERVICES

- assisting students in finding and using library materials;
- acquiring and processing materials that are added to elementary, intermediate and high school library collections;
- assisting students and teachers in making transparencies, graphs, charts and posters, taking pictures, producing TV programs and making recordings;

- distributing and maintaining audio-visual and television equipment;
- delivering films for teachers and administrators;
- providing specialized reading materials for students in regular reading classes as well as other students who need help in reading.

MATERIALS

- the resources of the high school libraries including books, magazines, pamphlets, tape recordings, records, slides, maps, charts, filmstrips and microfilms;
- a 4,000 volume Hawaiiana collection;
- a collection of reading and instructional materials for teachers and other staff;

- projectors for 8mm and 16mm film;
